discussing Controller O'Neill's recommendation that the residential restrictions be relaxed in the district south of Bloor street from Parliathe erection of three-family apartment houses and the conversion of old residences into such apartments. Finally it was referred back, pending the report of the heads of de partments on housing, by a vote of

Two deputations, one in favor and one opposed to the project, were heard by the Council. Mr W. E. Turley and Capt. Marani objected on behalf of the returned soldiers and the men at the front. The city and the men at the front. The city should, they urged, take advantage of the Government loan and build houses in the outskirts of the city under civic and Government supervision. Tenement houses were not wanted in the centre of the city, but homes without exorbitant charges through real estate speculation.

Mrs. Elizabeth Walker said that Mrs. Elizabeth Walker said that she had $30,000 invested in city property, and this, her best year, yielded a profit of $800. For two old residences in the centre of the city she had to use revenue from other property. There was a class in the city that had to be looked after in city that had to be looked after in the centre of the city. A large number of the city. A large number of the compulsthe centre of the city. A large num-ber of small families had to be ac-commodated in the central district. Controller O'Nelli's Arguments.

Controller O'Neill alleged that the opposition had originated with the Toronto Housing Company, as it was to their advantage to keep rentals high. Last year they had raised their rents, and increased them again this year. Last year the company had a deficit, and this year provision had to be made for a sinking fund. If anything would affect the company it was low rents, resulting from ample accommodation, he claimed.
