What Rothschild Said:---

The following little incident is told of the great Rothschild — the founder of the famous banking house of Europe:

By the way, did you know that he made the great bulk of his fortune through buying the War Bonds of Great Britain during the Napoleonic wars? True, his methods may not have been a bove criticism, but these Bonds so increased in value after victory came at Waterloo that he amassed a great fortune.

It is said that on one occasion a client called to consult Rothschild regard-ing an investment he had under consideration. After stating his case the great financier said, "First of all tell me one thing, do you want to eat well or sleep well?" "Do I want to eat well or sleep well," was the reply. "What's that got to do with the case, what I want to know is how to invest well."

"Excuse me," fired back the great financier, "but it has everything to do with the case; there are two classes of investments; first, those in which the element of chance plays a big part and which, if successful, enable a man to "eat well" and have a good time generally; then there is another class in which the return may be smaller, it is true, but in which there is really no risk and which need cause him no anxiety whatever—in other words, allow him to "sleep well."

Fortunately, the Victory Loan now asked is of the rather unusual class that enables a man to help himself by helping the Government. Just fancy, 514 per cent. interest—nearly double that paid by our savings banks-and absolutely no risk—your security being greater than that of all the Banks, Trust Companies and Mortgage Companies of the country combined.

The owner of Victory Bonds can have "good eats," and instead of hearing the roosters crow at night, will be wakened by the song of the morning
